30 Years of Jay & Irene

Welcome to the 30th season of Jay & Irene!

Over the years, Jay & Irene fans have been treated to some memorable moments, including baseball in the Dominican Republic and Mexico, and of course Dodger games with Jay's favorite manager, Tommy Lasorda.

When Jay isn't arranging under-the-table sweetheart deals for U.S.C. football recruits, he's usually trying to buy automobiles made by companies that are about to pull out of North America. Now he's searching for a 1910 Hatsudoki Seizo on the Longo Toyota lot.

Following her retirement from Los Angeles County, Irene stays busy buying airline tickets to Havana under assumed names. She also likes to crochet maroon and gold ear warmers for rabbits and look for secret anagrams in "Rufus B. von KleinSmid."

This season we expect a lot of excitement from Faymont Avenue. Jay is perfecting his remote-controlled Mascot Obliterator® Death Ray and Irene is looking forward wondering where Walt will next magically appear. But first, some vintage photos...

Little-known fact: Jay is president of the Dave Niehaus Fan Club
